

The Owingsville Outlook.

VOL. XVIII.

OWINGSVILLE, KENTUCKY, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 31, 1896.

NO. 25.

J. M. Richart bought, on Flat Creek, John W. Hughes' tobacco at 4c.

The weather continues favorable for a gripper and there are numerous cases of the disease in the town and county.

Ewing Conner and Bigo Wells will leave the first of next week for North Carolina with a drove of mules and horses.

David Garner and John W. Stanton rented the two toll-gates on the Owingsville & Stepstone turnpike for $265 for one year.

Richard H. Conner bought for $700 cash the Mrs. Sallie Richards house and lot on Main Street now occupied by Chas. D. Killpatrick.

COMMITTEE MEETING.—The Bath County Democratic Executive Committee will meet Jan. 11th, 1897, for the purpose of determining the time for holding the primary for the nominations for county officers.

BATH TOBACCO SALES IN LOUISVILLE.—Dec. 29d.—2 hhds. old lugs at $6.90, 4; 1 new trash, $3.55.

Dec. 29d.—3 hhds. new leaf at $5.50, 7; 1 new lugs, $5.95; 1 new trash, $3.70.—Courier-Journal.

TURNPIKE CONFERENCE.—On next Tuesday, Jan. 5th, the officers of the O. & S. Turnpike Co. will meet at Reynoldsville, the County Turnpike Commissioners to confer concerning the sale of the O. & S. road to the county.

GOOD TRADE.—What promised to be a rather dull Christmas trade with the local merchants developed into a rushing business with those that advertise. On the day before Christmas their stores were overcrowded with eager buyers.

OWINGSVILLE'S BANKS.—We call your attention to the semi-annual statements of the banks in town. The Farmers Bank declared a regular dividend of 6 percent on the Owingsville Banking Co. an annual dividend of 6 percent. These banks do a conservative, safe business and make a fine showing. They are creditable and most useful institutions.

ANNUAL ELECTION OF OFFICERS.—At the annual election of officers of Bath Lodge No. 55, Dec. 26th, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—

John A. Ramsey, W. M.; S. D. Thompson, S. W.; John D. McIntyre, J. W.; B. E. Perry, Treasurer; W. W. Perry, Secretary; L. O. Kimbrough, S. D.; S. C. Bascom, Jr., J. D.; S. C. McClain, Steward and Tiler.

Immediately following the election the newly elected officers were installed, after which a lunch was served in the Lodge room.

A DULL CHRISTMAS.—The past Christmas was about the dullest in Owingsville in a generation at least. There was no public observance of the holidays, no Christmas trees or entertainments except private ones. The burnt-pot odor of fire-works exploded by the small boys was not so distinguishable on account of the enforcement of the town ordinance against the explosion of fire-works. The weather was all that could be desired. The colored people enjoyed themselves highly, having entertainments at their hall. The Cornet band serenaded the town on Christmas day.

THE LEAP YEAR PARTY.—On Tuesday evening the young gentlemen were met at the Conner Hotel by the young ladies and escorted to the Leap Year Tacky Party given by the young ladies at the home of Miss Hallie Young. The guests were generally dressed in the most ancient costumes they could secure or invent. They amused themselves with old-fashioned plays and dances and had a most delightful entertainment. We regret we could not make a full report of it, for as we make up our forms Tuesday night and issue the paper early Wednesday morning we didn't have opportunity to report it at length.

MRS. ELIZA ANN GREEN'S DEATH.—Mrs. Eliza Ann Green died at her home in Rowan county near Lees Mill last Sunday and was buried Monday at the Slaty Point burial ground. She had been a sufferer for years and bedfast for a long time past. She was a daughter of Charles Bailey, Sr., who removed to Texas and died there a few years ago. Judge Warren Bailey, of Freestone, is a brother. She was wedded to Sampson Green, who preceded her to the grave a short time ago. Several children were born to them and grew to maturity, but none except their son John survives. Mrs. Green was a most excellent woman and had the esteem of a large acquaintance and the love of a wide circle of relatives and friends.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.—The following from the record at the County Clerk's office, since last issue, indicates a boom in the matrimonial market: David Walker Myers and Miss Carrie Allie White; Frank Carpenter, Jr., and Miss Effie Yarbrough; Clell McCarty and Miss Katie North; George W. Johnson and Miss Nora Crow; Virgil McNabb and Miss Allie Harper.

UNLUCKY TRADING.—A man giving his name as George Sherman, giving Morgan Co. as his home, sold to James H. Powers, of White Oak, three steers and a cow for $40. Mr. Powers gave him a check on the Farmers Bank, which Sherman presented and drew the money on. Some other people came along later hunting the same number and description of cattle, saying they were stolen.

EXCITING TIMES AT FARMERS.—On Christmas eve at Farmers Town Marshal Blunt arrested three men on a charge of intoxication. Two gave bond and were released. J. Monroe Padgett was held in jail, as the bond he offered was not satisfactory. The keys of the lock-up were intrusted to Deputy Marshal Kendall. There was a can of kerosene in the lock-up, and it is supposed that Padgett tried to burn his way out, as about 6:30 p.m. the prison was discovered to be on fire. Deputy Kendall was not to be found, and when the door of the prison was finally broken open Padgett was seen apparently dead in one corner. The flames prevented any attempt at rescue. When the fire died down his remains were taken out, horribly burned, the legs being burned off. Padgett's relatives and friends collected, and Kendall had to leave town to avoid their vengeance.

SOCIAL PARTY.—Jeff Horseman gave a Christmas social Friday night, at the home of his sister, Mrs. James F. Day. The young people present were: Misses Josie Conyers, Elan Estill, Inez Barber, Wyoming; Lide Tipton, Bertie Gault, Lide Crouch, Olga Moore, Myrtle Donaldson, Mary and Emma Kincaid, Sallie and Lucy Warner; Messrs. David Clark, Robert Berry, Sharpburg; Ed. Myers, E. Union, John Stout, Stepstone; J. T. Estill, Wyoming; Arthur Powers, Ewington; Wm. Jones and Dawson Tapp; County; Dr. Taubee, G. C. Ewing, Ollie Coons, Osmond Byron, Crt Young, George Warner, Milton Kincaid and John Shroat. An elegant lunch, consisting of fruits and cake, was served at 10:30, of which all partook with evident relish, and at 11:30 the company broke up with many expressions of a merry Christmas and a happy New Year to all.

OBITUARY.—Deborah Warner McDonald was born May 23, 1839, in Bath Co., Ky.; died Dec. 14, 1896, in Mississippi, where she had gone hoping to regain her health. In 1872, Sept. 3, she was united to Isaac McDonald in marriage, who preceded her to that better land. At the age of 19 years she was united with the Church of Christ at her mother's funeral under Elder Maxey in Ky. She never wavered as to her faith in her master, died fully trusting. She was a faithful wife, a loving sister, a kind neighbor, quite a favorite among the children. No sacrifice was too great for her to make in case of sickness. She leaves a host of relatives and friends to mourn her loss. To her memory we will say: Sister, thou art gone to that beautiful Heaven where all is light. There she shall join the chorus sweet worshipping at her Master's feet. Funeral services conducted by Rev. L. E. Brown, of Hamilton, O., Dec. 17, at Eaton, O.; interment in Mound Hill Cemetery, that city.

Mr. Tackett was reared on the headwaters of White Oak and went West many years ago. He was a lively, fun-loving young man, and he and THE OUTLOOK man fiddled and danced together pretty thoroughly over the territory contiguous to their homes in the days of their youth. He now shows his age, but doubtless could still draw a melodious bow and gracefully swing a partner in a jolly country shindig. Jim is being warmly greeted by his boyhood friends.

Correspondents will please remember to state their names and that they will reach us on Monday. This matter is seriously important to us.

The number of holiday killings and other lawlessness in Kentucky is enormous.

SENATOR CHANDLER rushes into print so frequently of late that he may be suspected of definite designs on the Presidency. His latest is to show that in reality the power of the President in a very small matter when Congress chooses to act.

The Republicans in Congress are going to do all in their power to keep Bryan alive and make it more formidable than ever in 1900. They are playing with the firebrand of international bimetalism, which will not burn Europe, but is a dangerous playing in the United States for inflaming the silver sentiment. On the tariff they bid fair to go beyond even McKinleyism.

THE news from Owensboro indicates that the Circuit Judge and Commonwealth's Attorney are going to exert themselves to the utmost to bring the lynchers of Holt to justice. They will have the support of the best public sentiment. Unless the State is to revert to savagery the officers and the law-abiding people everywhere in Kentucky must do their duty in enforcing and supporting the law. It is not improbable that the past six months have witnessed a more approach to anarchy than has been known since the Civil war, and the past two weeks it has been an awful experience in criminality in many counties. It will continue to get worse unless public sentiment is thoroughly aroused against it.

Remarkable Being.

Dr. C. P. Thayer, dean of Tufts College, and many other prominent physicians and surgeons, who visited Millie Christine, the Carolina twin, at the Masonic Temple yesterday afternoon, willingly and unhesitatingly give testimony to the remarkable and interesting woman. All the afternoon and evening crowds of people attended the receptions, and a great number expressed themselves as being thoroughly satisfied that she is every thing that she is represented to be.

A woman who is more than one, and yet not two. The bond of union, which is just above the bones of the spine, is chiefly cartilaginous, but the spines are so closely approximated that there is an osseous union between them. Born back to back, their natural desire to walk straight forward has twisted them to their present position. Each can pursue separate lines of thought and conversation independent of the other. From habit, their appetites call for food and drink at the same time. All the life of the flesh are not, however, necessarily the same in common, for one may have the toothache and the other be free from any ache. Touching them on any extreme of the body, except the heads, both in common are conscious of the touch. As children they used to have little struggles and quarrels for supremacy, but, as they could not get away from each other, they early concluded that the best way to get along in their novel path of life was to yield to each other.

The present happiness and affection for each other is an example for couples who are yoked together in married bonds. There has been no similar case reported reaching adult life.—Herald.

First Attend To Kentucky.

(Courier-Journal.)

It would be well for Kentucky to govern herself before Kentuckians fight, bleed and die to give the Cubans the right of self-government. Has Graves county, for instance, any local government, or is anarchy supreme?

The lawlessness of the recent mobs in committing murder and arson and in destroying toll-gates is simply indefensible in any civilized community. These outrages are a reproach to the State and a disgrace to the officers of the law. They reflect not only upon the cowards who constitute the mobs, but upon the entire communities in which they take place; for they would soon be checked, if they had not been wholly prevented, were local public sentiment wholly out of sympathy with them.

It is time that these crimes should cease. It is time that officials elected and paid to enforce the laws should do their duty. It is time that citizens should make known their determination to put down mobocracy. Less rhodomontade about suffering Cuba and more concern for suffering Kentucky is what we most need just now.

The Sheriff of Graves county who carried Jim Stone back to certain death from a place of safety, the jailer who took no steps to foil the mob he knew was gathering around, and, finally, those citizens of Mayfield not among the assassins, but who abetted the killing of a man against whom there was nothing but flimsy circumstantial evidence, are now arraigned at the bar of public opinion. In a case like this it is well to speak plainly and call attention to facts clearly evident. The mob at Mayfield had less provocation than the Russellville lynchers, though each was unquestionably guilty, for there was no question as to the guilt of at least two of the Proctors. But both Mayfield and Russellville are large and wealthy country towns with a population that might have easily been aroused to assist the majesty of the law had there been any disposition to do so on the part of the officials. It was a duty incumbent upon every citizen of the place to uphold the dignity of the Commonwealth when stories that the mob was coming began to be heard around; it is equally incumbent upon them now to see that the derelict and the guilty are brought to an accounting. That is the only way in which they can regain the respect and confidence of the remainder of the State.

The attention of the communities in which these proceedings have been occurring is called to the fact that there are other counties in the State and in other States in which mobs are unknown and deeds of violence are rare. What is it that makes the difference except that it be the complacency or the horror with which such crimes are regarded in the respective localities?

National Defenses.

(Commercial Tribune.)

Washington, Dec. 19.—In view of the present talk of war with Spain, naturally there is a great deal of interest in the coast defenses of American cities. Under the Squire bill, passed by Congress two years ago, a great deal has been accomplished in placing the important harbors of the Atlantic and Pacific and Gulf coasts in a position to maintain a good defense. Besides the heavy mortar batteries which have been mounted at Sandy Hook, guarding the entrance to New York harbor, a number of ten and twelve-inch rifle cannons have also been placed in position. All these large guns are mounted on disappearing carriages. Work of a similar character is progressing rapidly on the islands guarding the entrance to Boston harbor, and, in fact, at all the lesser ports. Emplacements for mortar batteries and disappearing rifle cannon are being rapidly constructed.

In the War of 1812 the British found but little difficulty in making their way up the Chesapeake and Potomac rivers, and the President and Congress being compelled to take to flight to prevent capture. Should a contest with Spain ensue, and that country send her entire naval force to try to capture the National capital, she would not succeed, even though not an American naval vessel would intervene. In the first place, such a fleet would have to run the gauntlet of some of the most powerful batteries in the world located at Fortress Monroe and Hampton Roads, guarding the entrance to the Chesapeake Bay. Besides these the entrance would be quickly straddled with submarine torpedoes, work on which has been so far completed in advance that they could all be placed in position in a night.

But even should all these obstacles prove unavailing, the fleet would again have to pass forces along the Potomac, which would be manned by the latest type of eight and ten-inch disappearing rifles.

Some of these guns are now being placed in position on the Virginia side of the Potomac, opposite old Fort Washington, and with their full fighting charge of powder will hurl a steel projectile of 400 to 500 pounds respectively, which will pierce the armor of any vessel, or the Spanish navy at a distance of three to four miles.

These disappearing gun carriages, like most modern improvements in the art of war, are purely an American device, not one being owned by any other government in the world. The general principle of the mechanism is that of a gigantic steel saw. The gun is slung from one end, and counterweights from the other. When the weights are released they sink and throw the gun into firing position above the embankment. The recoil of discharge throws the gun back out of sight, where it is loaded under shelter.

Then besides these guns on the Virginia shore, old Fort Washington, on the Maryland side, which up to a few years ago could have been knocked to pieces by a modern fleet in half a dozen shots, now presents as formidable a front as any defensive work of the kind in the possession of Great Britain. The picturesque old fort still stands with its empty casemates and a few rows of antiquated guns lying dismantled on the wharf. But two hundred yards further up stream there is a stretch of nice green turf running gently up from the water's edge to the top of the hill, and behind that innocent grass slope lies a battery of big modern rifles that could sink a battleship before she could get within four miles of the old fort. The battery on the Virginia side will also be hidden behind an unpretentious grass plot, but underneath that grass plot thousands of barrels of cement are being utilized in building up solid casemates sixty to seventy feet in depth. The details of the work are being kept secret so as to prevent them from falling into the hands of any foreign power.

At the navy yard in this city the gun shops have been working night and day with three shifts of men for a month. When the extra shifts were placed at work the middle of November, they were directed at finishing up the guns needed for the armament of the battleship Iowa, which are now almost ready for mounting.

Besides this work the Navy Department has been making a number of experiments on a new projectile, known as the Gathman shell. The object of this new shell is to safely fire an immense charge of high explosive from an ordinary gun. The explosive shell is used by the great powers of Europe to pierce armor and fortifications, and is aided in its destructive work by a charge of twenty or thirty pounds of ordinary powder. No one heretofore has succeeded in utilizing a quantity of high explosive, like gun cotton or nitroglycerine, in an ordinary shell, because the charge would be exploded by the shock accompanying the discharge of the gun. But the Gathman shell is a new departure. Instead of being an almost solid mass of steel, it is a mere frame 6 feet long and 12 inches in diameter, carrying 300 to 400 pounds of wet gun cotton. It depends for the damage it will do on the shock of the explosion rather than on the flying fragments of the shell itself.

The greatest feature of this shell is that it is open at the rear end, being fitted with a piston arrangement, which is shoved up by the expansion of the firing charge and equalizing the pressure inside and outside the thin shell of steel. The shell will not be expected to pierce armor plates at all, but simply to reach the mark it is aimed at, after which the explosion will do the rest. For 300 pounds of gun cotton exploded on the deck or against the side of a modern battle ship would demolish her. It would also wreck an armored coast defense turret or blow a whole bastion of masonry fort to atoms, to say nothing of killing every being within a wide radius by the shock of the explosion. In the contest which has been going on for a long time between guns and armor the Navy Department believes that in its new shell it has made the greatest discovery of all in favor of the guns.

Still the cry from all parts of the country for Cuba's independence, which should be heartily indorsed by all lovers of liberty; but the question is can we afford to take sides and get in a war on ourselves? which is more than likely if we do take sides. Whilst we may boast of our strength as a fighting nation there have been other powerful nations that have reached the height of their fall. I think we should learn a lesson from the man that went in to whip a fellow for whipping his wife. They both turned on him, hence he got the worst of it. So, while we are at peace, I say let us stay so, and instead of spending millions in death-dealing machinery would it not be more Christian to expend something in life-saving devices?

As he was returning home Xmas eve on a lonely part of a dirt road about 5 miles from Carlisle, a man climbed into the wagon from the rear, pushed him off the wagon, when another man in waiting cut him severely about the hands and arms, also cutting his clothing to pieces. He was then robbed of five dollars and left in the road. Ewel says one was white, the other black; that he thinks he knew one of them.

Editor of THE OUTLOOK: As nothing has been published in your paper since Dec. 11th regarding the death of Josiah Arrasmith I feel that a few words from one who knew him well would not be out of place, although several weeks have elapsed since his death.

I formed his acquaintance soon after the war. I knew his wife, as Miss Caroline Badger some years previous.

After their marriage I spent many pleasant hours in their hospitable home.

Josiah Arrasmith came of a long line of honest ancestry.

His father, Massie Arrasmith, was a man of sterling worth.

His mother was endowed with many noble qualities.

His wife and daughter possess many Christian virtues.

It is a wonder with such ancestry and tender home associations he became the devoted husband and father, the upright citizen he was? Although he had never made an open profession of religion he had a high regard for the ministry, and for every true Disciple of Christ.

He scorned hypocrisy as almost the lowest depth into which a man could sink.

He was a true friend where he professed friendship.

He loved Masonry with all its mystic rites.

To the uninitiated it was a deep mystery, but to him a bright and holy Order.

But deeper than this to his heart was "The Lost Cause," for which he gave the best years of his life.

His old comrades who shared the fortunes of war, who fought by his side, who slept on the lonely bivouac, were as near to him as the twin brothers he loved so well.

What more fitting burial could he have had than for those old veterans to lay him away? As they heaped up the sod with tender hands, old memories of the hardships endured together crowded into their minds until the tears that could no longer be repressed trickled down their cheeks.

He will be missed not only by his immediate friends, but afar off are many that mourn their loss. Moorefield, Dec. 27, '96. D.

Mrs. Wm. Ragan died of consumption Dec. 26, aged 56. She was a member of the Christian Church and will be sadly missed by her many friends and relatives. H. D. Clark preached her funeral. She was buried in the old family burying ground.

Stepstone would be a good location for a good physician, as quite a number have been sick and are sick and no physician nearer than Howard's Mill, Mt. Sterling and Owingsville. Drs. Duerson, Drake and Clark are quite busy in this vicinity. Let us have a good physician and patronize him at home.

Mrs. Thomas Williams, of Leon, Carter Co., a lady 73 years of age, who had been making her home with her son, Shad Williams, of Moorefield, for past few years, had gone on a visit to see her children in Carter Co. for the last time. While on the road to the train on her return home near Soldier, Ky., was tripped by a briar in the road, fell and fractured her left hip, but her left shoulder out of place and broke her left arm just below the shoulder. She was in a few days of the depot at that time, and was carried to Joe Williams' in Soldier, and treated by the physician for several days. Shad Williams then went for her and brought her here on the train to James Williams', at Stepstone, and took her from here home in a buggy, in quite a serious condition; yet through all of this the old lady was as kind and gentle as a lamb, leaning on and trusting in her Christian faith in God and asking him to be with her, and thanking him for his past favors. She said: "I put my trust in God and if it is His will He will see me safely home, but He knows and does what is best." She was quite a worthy example indeed to the young and careless to see such a noble character, such true Christian faith in such a serious condition, and such a noble example of patience can never be forgotten by all who saw her. In parting she said: "I want you to ask God to help me get through." She said she was the mother of nine children, had been an active laborer all of her life and had been sick very little, and had taken very little medicine.
